I open my phone
Go to Snapchat just to see I'm alone
Sure, leave me on "opened," I don't care
"You lost all your streaks."
Yes, I know I'm aware
My mom took my phone
The reason unknown
I sit at night, what to do?
If I steal it back, the day I will rue
I wait until midnight after my parents are asleep
I step on a Lego, the plastic cuts deep
I try not to scream and continue the mission
I try to sprint back in poor condition
I get back to my bed
Tears pain but then of joy
I'm reunited with the one I love
It fits in my hand just like a glove
I feel the radiation warming in my chest
I felt naked without it and now I'm well dressed
I can finally sleep
If anyone takes it again, I'm sure I will reap
