An Ode to the Future

Sing a song of the present,
Written for the wild and free,
But burdened are the "blessed"
Kept sobbing on their knees.

Paint a picture of the past,
Maybe strong in your memory,
But those days now ash
And to them no returning.

But feeling something for the future,
I turn, instead, to writing. I take a deep breath
And forth a poem springs.
Glad, hopeful thing, bright
To the current misery—
I'm pleased to meet your acquaintance;
Let us go hand and hand,
Not too slow, not too swiftly,
Towards eternity—
