GROWTH TREND CONTINUES FOR TSUD

Troy State University at Dothan with its locations at Fort Rucker and Chipola Jr. College have again experienced significant growth in student enrollment for the 1994 Winter Quarter. Enrollment figures stand at 2,606 (including unduplicated headcount from winter interim), a 9.0 percent increase over the 1993 Winter Quarter. This marks twenty-six consecutive quarters of increased enrollment at TSUD and the largest enrollment in the history of the University.

At traditional residential colleges, winter quarter enrollment is usually smaller than that for fall quarter. However, with TSUD's predominantly non-traditional student body, enrollment patterns at TSUD are not necessarily typical of those at other institutions. TSUD's enrollment for the 1994 Winter Quarter exceeds that of fall quarter by 4.2%.

Dr. Frank Lovrich, vice president for academic affairs at TSUD, said, "With the increase of enrollment over the past several quarters, the problem of available space has also increased. Our contingency plan will be scheduling more classes during the morning and utilizing more space at the Northside Mall location." He added, "More and more people in the Wiregrass are realizing the importance of an education, and the word is spreading about the caliber and expertise of our full-time and adjunct faculty. Students are finding they can receive a quality education without having to leave the area."

Dr. Jack Sublette, executive vice president and vice president for student affairs at TSUD, commented, "Students continue to enroll in increasing numbers because they know that TSUD offers the programs, facilities, and services necessary for a quality education."

TECHNOLOGY PROGRAM DEVELOPED AT TSUD

TSUD announced recently that it has received approval from the Alabama Commission on Higher Education (ACHE) to offer the Bachelor of Applied Science degree in Technology Management, beginning Spring Quarter 1994.

After deliberation and input from area two-year colleges, the program was developed with the goal of making an advanced degree more accessible to graduates with either the Associate of Science or Associate of Applied Science degree. The development of the technology management program is also a response by TSUD to recommendations made by the Wiregrass Inter-institutional Coordinating Agreement to provide program articulation to facilitate continuous progress for students in the Wiregrass area pursuing a bachelor's degree.

The program has been in the developmental stages for quite some time. According to Dr. Frank Lov-rich, TSUD vice president for academic affairs, "TSUD began pursuing a technology management program at the bachelor's level after holding a series of meetings with personnel from Wallace College and consultation with personnel from the city and county school systems. The consensus was to be able to offer a program at the bachelor's level for those students who completed associate degrees in a number of technical areas, and who wanted to pursue a bachelor's degree. The added expertise could give them the opportunity for advancement in the work place."

This program complements the idea of a "seamless web of education" in the technical areas. Area students can start with Tech Prep, obtain an associate degree, and then finish with a bachelor's degree.

The planning and hard work paid off recently as ACHE accepted the revisions suggested by TSUD and approved the Bachelor of Applied Science degree in Technology Management.

Mr. Johnny Joyner, dean, Technical Division at Wallace College, commented, "This Bachelor of Applied Science degree will be one of the first true 2+2+2 programs in the state, and we are excited to be a part of this joint endeavor with Troy State University at Dothan. We feel that this B. A. S. degree with the management and general education component will fulfill a need for business and industry in southeast Alabama. It will provide an excellent opportunity for Wiregrass students to continue their education."

Currently, the Wiregrass Higher Education Committee is working to assist and foster such endeavors in the Wiregrass area. Roger Denisar, representative of the Wiregrass Higher Education Committee, said, "I am extremely pleased with the promptness and response from all institutions involved in regard to the development of this bachelor's degree program. By obtaining this degree, individuals gain expertise in their field, thus giving them the opportunity for advancement in the work force and a better quality of life."

TECHNOLOGY COURSES ON CUTTING EDGE

Beginning Winter Quarter 1994, TSUD is offering the technology courses for the Technology Scholarship Program for Alabama Teachers (TSPAT).

The first course in a series of three, Computer-Based Instructional Technologies, is an introductory course to teach the fundamentals of computer usage and to prepare students to be competent computer-based technologists. The Educational Technology program at TSUD is dedicated to the preparation of individuals for competent computer-based/multimedia use and integration into all classroom instructional models.

According to Dr. Betty Kennedy, dean of the School of Education at TSUD, all three courses are administered under a team-teaching approach. "Our faculty teaching the technology courses are highly qualified and possess an abundance of experience in computer systems, computer applications, and integration of computers in the classroom," stated Kennedy. Students have available to them two state-of-the-art computer laboratories, multimedia resources, and an interactive classroom for offering the latest in technology and distance learning. Kennedy added, "Our technology and expertise in computer-based instruction places us in the forefront of educational technology in this region. The use of technology in the classroom is the cornerstone for educational reform not only for our region and state, but for the entire nation." TSUD already infuses the use of technology in all of its teaching field courses.

TSUD faculty members who are team-teaching the educational technology courses are Dr. Gary Buchanan, assistant professor of management information systems; Mr. Jim Hartsfield, director of the Instructional Support Center; Mr. Danny Wall, director of data processing; and Dr. Diane Murphy, assistant professor in the School of Education. Each member was instrumental in the development of the Educational Technology program at TSUD, and all bring a wealth of knowledge from their areas of expertise.

In upcoming quarters, TSUD will offer the remaining courses in the series. The second course builds on the first and provides more in-depth training in the use of computers and multimedia technology. The third course prepares students to apply the knowledge learned from the previous two courses into classroom instruction and decision-making processes. The courses must be taken in sequence.

TSUD ACCEPTED INTO COUNCIL

Dr. Darryl Roberds, associate professor of management, announced that TSUD has been accepted for membership in the University Council of Industrial Relations and Human Resources Programs (UCIRHRP).

Membership in the UCIRHRP is made up of academic units and specialized degree programs devoted specifically to research and/or teaching in the fields of industrial relations, human resources, or other closely related subject areas pertaining to the study of the employment relationship. Membership in the council includes such institutions as Princeton, Rutgers, Purdue, Penn State, the University of California, Loyola, Cornell, the University of Alabama and approximately 70 other major universities in the U.S. and Canada. Of the 55 applications for membership in 1993, only about half were accepted by the council's board of directors. TSUD is the smallest university that has been accepted for membership which significantly adds to the prestige of our M.S. in human resource management.

SPRING SCHEDULE OF CLASSES

The 1994 Spring Quarter Schedule of Classes will be available on the TSUD campus, Friday, February 25, in time for Advisement Week, February 28-March 3.

HEALTHY READING: KEEPING YOUR '94 RESOLUTIONS

Like noisemakers, funny hats, and the ball dropping over Times Square, making resolutions is a New Year's tradition. This year, if your resolution is to eat better and get more exercise, here are a few tips to help you succeed.

- Exercise your right to lose weight.
- There are no forbidden foods.

- Words to live by: broiled, boiled, baked, steamed, and poached.
- Two bodies (workout partners) are better than one.
- Don't ride when you can walk.
- Snack smart, look smart.

Ten Minutes Can Do It

Believe it or not, in ten minutes you can help make a difference in your physical fitness. A growing body of research suggests that accumulating 30 minutes of activity per day can contribute to overall gains in fitness. That means you can put at least three ten-minute walks together and you'll get the same heart-protecting benefits as if you did a single, longer workout. If you haven't been exercising, this is a good way to get started.

Fitness walking has been one of the fastest growing activities of the decade, simply because you can walk anytime, anywhere. You can do it in little bits and pieces or gradually build up to a single, longer workout. It's a natural activity—one of the most beneficial forms of exercise. Walking and a sensible diet go hand-in-hand. And this natural combination will help keep you feeling your best.

Next month, LOGOS will feature information on ways to balance your diet.

LIBRARY NEWS

By Hong Wu, reference librarian, TSUD Library

Internet: The Place to Be

It is difficult to think of any online information system that has had the wide ranging impact on scholars in such a short time as Internet. A worldwide connection of computer networks, Internet allows users to access and share a vast array of information products and services.

What does Internet do?

Internet has three major functions:

A: Sending and receiving electronic messages (E-Mail):

The E-mail function of Internet allows you to "talk" with your friends at any part of the country, or even the world through the computer at a high speed without any charge. You can also join discussion groups of your field, read about issues of your field, ask questions of your colleagues, or "publish" your recent research achievement — there is no censorship office on Internet and everyone is enjoying absolute academic freedom. Though you may get some "junk" messages, it is also true that many academic findings are first exposed through this channel. Due to its high speed, low cost and convenience, it is not surprising that E-Mail is replacing the traditional communication channels such as paper mail, phone and fax.

B: Logging into networks of remote institutions (Telnet):

The Telnet function of Internet allows you to access information provided by hundreds of university and institution networks. For example, if you telnet to University of Florida (Telnet nervm.nerdc.ufl.edu), you can search its online Eric index and library book catalog. If you telnet to Library of Congress (Telnet locis.loc.gov), you can search its 15 million records for music, books, software, maps and manuscripts, browse federal legislation, legal documents, copyright restrictions and some foreign legal references and legislation. There is indeed an ocean of information out there for you to explore. Novice users may feel lost. However, once you figure it out, you can drive all over the place.

C: Transferring files (FTP - file transfer protocol):

FTP allows you to download to your system information from another site. You can download free software and electronic journals or books. As with Telnet, the amount of information available is almost overwhelming. However, Archie, a sophisticated Internet Index service, can guide you to the place you want to go.

Do we have access to Internet?

Yes, we do. TSUD faculty and students can access Internet through "dumb terminals" in the Data Processing Room in Malone Hall. We can send E-Mails, or telnet to certain libraries. However, we cannot download files at this point.

A word from Frank Walker, library director:

One of the pleasures of working in a university library is that of collection development. Library staff share that important responsibility with faculty and staff of the University. One of the titles recently acquired by the Library should be of interest to the university community. That title Battle of the Books: The Curriculum Debate in America, according to the reviews, is one of the most readable discussions of the so-called curriculum debate that has been raging in American colleges and universities in recent years. Readers will argue about the book but as the reviewer says, "Indeed, it is hard to imagine a book on this topic that is worth reading which will not offend many readers."

Committee meeting on January 19; held individual business counseling sessions at the Enterprise Chamber of Commerce on January 20; held individual business counseling sessions at the Ozark Chamber of Commerce on January 25; made presentations at two new business workshops sponsored by TSU/TSUD Small Business Development Center and the State Department of Revenue on January 27.

NEW FACES AT TSUD

Dr. Patricia Nelson joins TSUD as assistant professor in the School of Education. A native of Oklahoma, Dr. Nelson received her M.S. at the University of Tulsa and her Ph.D. at Oklahoma State University. Her area of specialization is mental retardation. Dr. Nelson has served as a professor at the University of Tulsa, the University of Eastern Kentucky, and Murray State University. She also served as the associate director of the Protection Advocacy Agency in Tulsa.

Dr. Nelson believes TSUD is not only progressive but "is the place to be." In addition, she feels the environment at TSUD is friendly, enthusiastic, and highly cooperative. She also notes that compared to other universities, TSUD students are the finest.

Mr. John White comes to the College of Arts and Sciences as instructor with twenty years of service with the Dothan Police Department. A Dothan native, White received his M.S. in counseling from TSUD, is a graduate of the FBI Academy, and has completed studies in street gang subcultures from Rio Hondo College in Los Angeles. He and his wife, Barbara, have been married nineteen years, and they have two sons, Aaron and Adam.

With regard to TSUD, he feels that he has never met a "nicer bunch of people—both faculty and staff."

Dr. Robert Albano joins TSUD as assistant professor for the College of Arts and Sciences. A native of Los Angeles, he received his M.S. from California State University at Sacramento. Dr. Albano focused his doctoral studies at Purdue University in the area of medieval literature. He remained to teach at Purdue and later moved to the University of Nevada, Las Vegas as a lecturer.

Surprisingly odd to Dr. Albano has been the wintry weather here in the Wiregrass. He likes the fact that TSUD is a growing university with many possibilities.

Ms. Janet McQueen joins the TSUD staff as administrative assistant to the vice president for financial affairs and administration. She received her B.S. in Business Administration/Human Resource Management from Hawaii Pacific University. She and her husband, John, retired military, reside in Headland. They have three sons: Jason, 21; Jeremy 20; and Jared 14. She says that she enjoys being a part of the TSUD staff.

Not new to TSUD, Jeraldine Fillingim joins the staff as a deli assistant. A native of Phenix City, she graduated from Central High School and relocated to Dothan to work as a security officer at TSUD. Jeri often worked as a security officer at TSUD. Horseback riding, basketball, and dirt bikes are just a few of her interests. She loves working at TSUD and enjoys her fellow employees as well as meeting the students.
