PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

Validation. How many times have you participated in a professional meeting where you engaged in dialogue with colleagues and came back somewhat smarter but most definitely validated that you (we) are doing things quite well, thank you? Recently, I experienced this first hand.

General Tony Jones, Commanding General at Ft. Rucker, nominated me to join ninety-nine other civilians in attendance at the National Security Seminar at The Army War College, Carlisle, Pennsylvania. We were invited to participate in a week-long discussion with two hundred fifty very bright, very motivated Lt. colonels and colonels (U.S. and international) who had been together for a year of study on strategic command national security in the 21st century.

Suffice it to say my civilian colleagues had to process a plethora of information and react to this information as a capstone agenda for these aspiring generals (and admirals). The War College staff constantly encouraged us to speak our minds as a "rounding" experience for the students. By the second day, we civilians felt properly "socialized" to share our views.

We spent a lot of seminar time talking about strategic management. These officers are moving out of a command and control mode, becoming leaders who think strategically, react strategically, and evaluate strategically.

During the seminars my thoughts often drifted back to Dothan whereby I reflected on the events of the past three years at TSUD. The more I reflected--the more I was validated in my analysis that we (you) have done an exemplary job of envisioning who we are and who we could be; how we could move to a new level of quality; and how we would know it when we got there!

Over the past three years we, like the officers' class at Carlisle, have thought creatively and acted strategically. The proof is in the self-study of SACS. The proof is in the NCATE final report. The proof is in the technological infrastructure that we now almost take for granted. The proof is in the fact we will have a smooth transition to the semester system. Need I go on?

I came away from my wonderful week at Carlisle impressed by the caliber of men and women who will be improving the strategic processes of our armed services. And, I am equally impressed by the caliber of thought and work that you constantly bring to this university. This was not new news to me. It only validated what I already knew.

Michael E. Malone
President

MALONE HONORED BY STATE TRIO ASSOCIATION

Troy State University Dothan President Michael E. Malone was recently honored at the Alabama Association of Educational Opportunity Program Personnel (AAEOPP) Spring Training Conference held in Birmingham. AAEOPP is the state association for all ninety-one TRIO programs in Alabama. The awards were presented to all state presidents of colleges and universities or agencies with one or more TRIO programs.

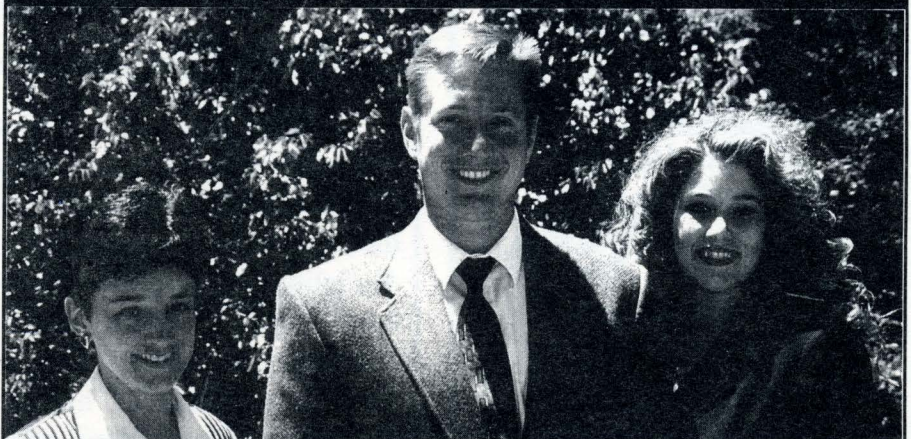

TRIO programs are federally funded educational opportunity programs that help low-income, disadvantaged students enter and succeed in college. While student financial aid programs are designed to help students overcome financial barriers to higher education, TRIO programs help students overcome environmental, cultural, and academic barriers. TRIO programs like Upward Bound, Talent Search, and Student Support Services offer encouragement and support to disadvantaged students, as well as academic instruction, counseling, tutoring, and assistance in applying for financial aid.

Debora Pettway, director of Student Support Services (SSS) at TSUD said, "I believe the AAEOPP awards were an excellent opportunity to show how much TRIO programs appreciate the support of its college or university presidents. And as we prepare to rewrite our grant for the year 2000 here at TSUD, it will be leaders like Dr. Malone who help insure the continued service and growth of SSS. I can recall being on the interviewing committee and meeting Dr. Malone before he was hired as TSUD president. Even then, I was impressed by his knowledge about the many successful TRIO programs that are offered nationwide. Dr. Malone has, from day one of his administration, supported the work that we do in SSS, and he understands the significant impact SSS has on the TSUD students we serve."

The main goal of the TSUD Student Support Services program is to help students stay in college until they earn their baccalaureate degree. Participants, who include disabled college students, receive helpful tutoring, counseling, and instruction. Currently, there are 178,000 students being served at 707 similar SSS college and university programs nationwide.

TSU BAND PROGRAM PLANS FIRST SUMMER MUSIC GAMES

Troy State University will rock with the sounds of the best drum and bugle corps in the nation this July as the TSU band program sponsors the first Trojan Summer Music Games.

The event, a part of the Drum Corps International summer tour, is scheduled for Tuesday, July 20, according to Robert W. Smith, TSU Director of Bands. The competition will begin at 7 P.M. on Richard M. Scrushy Field at Memorial Stadium. "We're hoping this will be one of the biggest music events ever held in southeast Alabama," Smith said. "There are thousands of drum and bugle corps fans across the state, and we believe we can draw enough support to make this an annual event."

Tickets are now on sale for the event. Prices are $20 for the reserved seatback section, $15 for reserved tickets, $10 for general admission, and $8 for schools and groups. Call the TSU box office at (334) 670-3293 to reserve tickets. Proceeds will benefit Troy State University's "Sound of the South" marching band.

The corps that will participate at the Trojan Summer Music Games are made up of some of the most talented high school and college musicians in the nation, according to Susan Smith, who is coordinating the event. The corps consists of a percussion section, brass section, and color guard performing intricate marching routines and playing music that ranges from Queen's "Bohemian Rhapsody" to "Jump, Jive an' Wail" by Louis Prima to "Fantasy in G" by Timothy Mahr. "These students tour the nation all summer, sleeping on high school gym floors and performing more than 45 dates," Ms.

Smith said. "The corps that will perform here, for example, will have performed in Columbia, SC, the day before coming to Troy." Six corps are scheduled to perform at the inaugural Trojan Summer Music Games: The Cavaliers from Chicago, IL; Crossmen from Burlington, NJ; Bluecoats of Canton, OH; Magic of Orlando, FL; Spirit of Atlanta, GA; and Tarheel Sun of Cary, NC.

"We're hoping this will not only raise money for our band program, but that it will allow us to expose high school band students to this level of performance and to the TSU excitement," Ms Smith said. "We also want to provide quality entertainment for the area and help boost the local economy."

From Montgomery...

TSUM HOST CONFERENCE SAFE AND SECURE: REDUCING SCHOOL VIOLENCE IN THE NEW MILLENNIUM

On Friday, May 21, 1999, TSUM hosted a conference that was co-sponsored by BellSouth Foundation and TSUM. The conference title was "Safe and Secure: Reducing School Violence in the New Millennium." The conference was a great success. TSUM had a final tally of 155 participants. Most were from the State of Alabama, but several people attended from Georgia, including one counselor from Conyers, GA, where a school shooting had occurred only one day earlier on May 20, 1999. Among the participants from Alabama, there were eight police officers who work with or in the schools. The group included several superintendents, many principals, teachers, and counselors from all grade levels.

The participants' evaluations completed at the end of the conference were very positive, with more than 70% of all respondents making positive comments. They were very laudatory about the content of the conference and the excellence of the speakers. Two distinguished scholars (Dr. Dale Pietrzak and Dr. Steuart Watson), who are nationally recognized experts in the area of violence prevention and improving school safety, were the principal speakers. Conference topics focused on dealing with the causes and effects of violence and providing strategies for prevention and appropriate responses to violent incidents. There were discussion groups focusing on: assessing dangers, developing crisis management plans, dealing with violent students, and preventing and responding to violence. Conference participants were also provided with information regarding state and federal resources that outline procedures for developing strategies that can be implemented at the local level.

TSUM received great press coverage from two local TV stations (WAKA and WSFA). Both stations ran segments about the conference on both the late afternoon and the evening news programs (including an interview with the counselor from Conyers, GA, and interviews with the two guest speakers). TSUM and BellSouth Foundation both received very positive coverage from the event. Several participants suggested that TSUM present the conference again in the fall of 1999 when all schools in the state will be in session (note that many Alabama schools had already closed for the year by May 21). TSUM will be discussing this possibility with BellSouth Foundation staff during the next month.

Quest for Excellence TSUD Library/Technology Building

Let's continue our tour of the TSUD Library/Technology Building...

Before we leave the first floor, let's take a step outside. Outside of the Library/Technology Building will be the Community Veranda which will be used as a peaceful place for study and reflection. The Wiregrass community will take pleasure from the serene outdoor setting that will showcase a variety of artistic performances. On any given day, a poetry reading might be taking place or the TSUD Community Band might be in concert. The Community Veranda certainly will accentuate the intellectual, artistic, and social environment at TSUD.
