

Free Taichi and Chinese Painting were Welcomed at Chinese Corner

On April 2nd, 2015, the Chinese Corner of Confucius Institute at Troy University was held as scheduled. The topic of this week is Chinese painting, the lecturer Karen Yu has analyzed the broad and profound traditional Chinese painting techniques in very simple language and easy to understand steps, even the first learners could understand and paint with a sense of achievement, so that the participants' passion can be motivated. All the present faculty and students created masterpieces in their heart, testifying the old saying that there is no boundaries for art and music.

The Taichi class for this term is practiced from the basic movement. After insisting on the 4 lessons, many students have already grasped the sports spirit of Taichi, as one kind of Chinese martial arts. At the end of this Taichi class, some students spontaneously discuss and learn from each other, conveying and promoting the spirit of Chinese martial arts in the exchange.
